Does legendsfilmfestivals.com share the information it receives with anyone else?

Information about our customers is an important part of our business and we will not sell it on to others unless you have given your specific consent for us to do so.

Occasionally, we may wish to notify you of products or services provided by third party companies which we feel are relevant to your interest in our Festival but again, we will only do this if you have given us your explicit consent to do this.

How secure is information about me?

The company that hosts our site, 1&1, works to protect the security of your information during transmission by using Secure Sockets Layer (SSL) software, which encrypts information you input.

When paying via PayPal with a credit or debit card it will show only the last four digits of your credit card numbers when confirming an order – although naturally it transmits the entire credit card number to the appropriate credit card company during order processing.
